PRESS RELEASE

On the Cutting Edge

Groveland, MA. Union Machine Company, a Service-Disabled Veteran-Owned prime contractor of Jet Engine parts located in Groveland, MA has commenced the New Year with a bang.

Utilizing the latest in YAG LASER technology, the company has launched an entire division dedicated to servicing the needs of the aerospace industry for 5-Axis non-conventional cutting and drilling. Union obtained both NADCAP certification and GT193 certification from General Electric in the 4th quarter of 2009.

Ray Wilder, head of the newly formed Aircraft Laser Services division, speaks about the prospects of this technological leap forward:

“Our current laser beam technology allows us to obtain a more consistent quality cut with minimal re-melt and often in half the time of previous generations. These new machines can cut complex contours and drill through material up to ½” thick which had been unheard of until recently.”

Union Machine President, Eric Harper, expressed his sentiments about the new division: “It’s always exciting to watch the latest cutting-edge technology come on-line.

“These are uncertain times in many ways, but we can rest assured that our customers depend upon us to consistently upgrade and improve the way we do business.

“The Aircraft Laser Services division is an integral part of Union Machine’s overall capability portfolio and one with which we expect will provide a substantial return on investment for our customers.”
